

Amy joined Boeing in 1989 as a BCA Financial Analyst, after working 4 years for Princess Tours in Seattle. She became a manager and joined BMA in 1997, working across many programs and departments in the following years, including 3 years in Melbourne, Australia. Amy retired in July 2018 after 28 years with the company.

She is a lifelong northwest native, growing up next to McChord Air Force Base, attending the University of Washington and Seattle University, and loves getting out to explore everything our region offers year round. Amy has also traveled extensively around the world and truly enjoys researching destinations, creating itineraries, planning for many options and then setting out on the journey. Her other interests include photography, teaching and taking classes, enjoying cocktails, wine and food with interesting people, hiking, cooking, gardening while listening to podcasts, and then enjoying the yard with a good book on the back patio.

Amy lives in south Snohomish County with her rescue dog & cat, and has a son at Purdue University in Indiana.
