Debussy La Mer
SYMPHONIC SERIES

All the subtlety and color of French music comes together in this concert — the music of visionaries. Messiaen’s deeply held religious faith inspired music of great spirituality, which he captured in this early work — a meditation on sacramental offerings both given and received.

The King's Singers: The New World
EXCLUSIVES

The Age of Discovery in the 16th century saw horizons expand around the world. European explorers and merchants travelled to unexplored lands, developing links in food, art, religion, and music. In particular, the exploration of South and Central America by the Spanish and Portuguese at this time led to some of the most colourful, dramatic, and long-lasting cultural fusions in history.

Mahler Symphony No. 1 SYMPHONIC SERIES

Setting out on his own great symphonic odyssey, Gustav Mahler painted the silent stillness of first light in an eternal natural setting. Distant birdcalls and trumpets stir the air, and the wanderer is underway.

Mahler Untuxed UNTUXED SERIES

In the stillness of dawn, distant horns sound. The birds chirrup and the world awakens to Mahler's genius. This would be a symphony like none before — turning on a dime between the downright folksy, the comedic, tragic and the unforgettably sublime.

Faure Requim
SYMPHONIC SERIES

Gabriel Fauré, who was sent to train as a church organist at only 9 years old, must have provided music for countless funerals. But he said he composed this Requiem “for pleasure.” This would be a Requiem to bring comfort to those who mourn, a series of heavenly tableaux rather than fire and brimstone, and one of his most beloved works.
